Sch. Centennial Leads Fleet of Fifteen Salt Herring Crafts.

SEVERAL OTHERS CLOSE BEHIND.

All Report Very Rough Weather Coming Home.

Since Tuesday noon four of the salt herring fleet, schs. Centennial, A. M. Nicholson, American and Maggie and May, have arrived, the first three coming Tuesday afternoon and the other this morning.

Sch. Centennial made a record for herself of which she may well be proud. In company with 14 others of the salt herring fleet, many of them "toothpicks" and flyers, she left Bay of Islands, N. F., a week ago Monday. All were bound home with full cargoes, so of course it was a race to see which would reach this port in the lead. It was very bad weather all the way, but it is needless to say that the vessels were sent along for all they were worth and plenty of sail carried.

Capt. William Cann was in charge of the Centennial and he sent the old style vessel, which, by the way, was built in Essex in 1876, along for all she was worth. On Tuesday morning Boston light was made and the vessel beat back to this port, arriving here early in the afternoon, the first of all the fine fleet of 15 which left Bay of Islands a week ago Monday. It was certainly good work and Capt. Cann and the old Centennial are deserving of credit.

The Centennial did not have much lee way, for soon after she arrived, the staunch sch. A. M. Nicholson of Bucksport, commanded by Capt. Daniel A. Cogill of this port came in, and a little later sch. American, Capt. Matthias Clausen, arrived. Sch. Maggie and May, Capt. George Peepes, came this morning. She sailed from here November 1 and consequently was only 27 days gone on the whole trip.

Capt. Cogill of sch. A. M. Nicholson reports leaving Bay of Islands, N. F., a week ago Monday in company with 14 others of the salt herring fleet, all bound home with full cargoes. Capt. Cogill reports a very rough passage, having 70 barrels of ripped herring washed off from deck by a sea which swept over the craft.

Last of the Fleet.

Sch. Fernwood, which arrived home this morning with a big fare, is the last of the salt Bank fleet this season.
